Miss Elizabeth Brown Morgan, the daughter of Henry P. Morgan, of No. 162 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, was married to N. Pendleton Schenck at 2 p. m., in St. Ann's Church, on the Heights; the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Dr. Noah Hunt Schenck, rector of the church and father of the groom. Edward Kent, of Fishkill, was the best man and the ushers were James A. Renwick, F. K. Pendleton, Charles E. Bill and Ernest W. Schenck, brother of the groom. The bridesmaids were Miss Sarah L. Morgan, Miss Ida Schenck, Miss Anna P. Schenck, Miss Harriet R. Otis, Miss Bulkeley, of Hartford; and Miss May B. Prentice. They wore pretty costumes of white foulard silk, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, their collures being adorned with pink feathers. They carried baskets of pink and yellow roses. The bride was given away by her father and wore a dress of brocaded satin, with a long train, square corsage, and trimmings of point appliqué lace. Her tulle veil was caught with the traditional orange buds and her bouquet was of white roses and lilies. The reception was held at the house of Mr. Morgan, which was trimmed with flowers and plants. Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. George D. Morgan, of Irvington; Mrs. E. A. Bulkeley, Mayor Bulkeley, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bulkeley and Mr. and Mrs. L. Brainerd, of Hartford, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. R. Fulton Cutting, Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Cutting, Mr. and Mrs. John Bowers, the Messrs. Pendleton, Mr. and Mrs. Spottswood D. Schenck, Mrs. Morgan L. Smith, of Newark; the Rev. John B. Morgan, of Paris; Charles E. Bill and Mr. and Mrs. Jobu Prentice.

The Brooklyn Tabernacle was the scene in the evening of the marriage of Miss Jessie Talmage, daughter of the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, and Warren G. Smith, a jeweller of Brooklyn. The ceremony was performed by the father of the bride, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Goyu Talmage, uncle of the bride. The pulpit was banked with flowers and plants, and Henry Eyre Brown presided at the organ. Five thousand invitations had been issued for the church. The ushers were Albert Cromwell, Henry Crane, William A. Adriance, Louis Bliss, J. W. Dowling, jr. and George Smith. The bridesmaids were Miss May M. Talmage, Miss Edith E. Talmage, Miss Henrietta Scrymser and Miss Jennie DeWitt. They wore costumes of white silk and lace, and white silk hats faced and trimmed with red velvet and white feathers. They carried bouquets of red roses. The four bridesmaids were preceded by four ushers, and then came the bride and groom. After them tripped Miss Daisy and Miss Maud Talmage, little sisters of the bride, carrying baskets of pink rose-buds. Two ushers brought up the rear. The entrance of the party was greeted with great interest as the organ struck up a wedding march. After the ceremony a reception was held at Mr. Talmage's house, No. 1 South Oxford-st., where there were music, flowers, refreshments, etc. Among the guests were J. S. T. Stranahan and wife, William C. Kingsley, Mrs. Henry Hilton, William Hilton, Joseph F. Knapp, General Meserole and wife, ex-Judge Neilson and wife, Charles Pratt and wife, E. L. Ward, Miss Ward, Mr. and Mrs. John Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Waters, and Colonel Horatio C. King. The groom's presents to the bride were solitaire diamond earrings and pin with five large diamonds, which the bride wore. The bride's father and mother gave her a grand piano.

An interesting wedding took place in the evening at No. 36 East Fifty-seventh-st., the house of D. A. de Lima, whose daughter, Miss Esther A. de Lima, was married to Elias A. de Lima by the Rev. H. P. Mendez. The bride and groom are well known in Spanish-Hebrew circles. One feature of the ceremonies, which is peculiar to the Spanish-Jews, though used by all Spaniards before the fifteenth century, was the talamo, or dais, raised three steps high, draped with gold and scarlet cloth, and covered with a roof of roses from which hung a white dove. The bride and groom occupied gilded chairs inside the talamo, and the rabbi stood in front. An extension had been built in the rear of the hall for a banquet room. Between the parlors hung a large bell of roses. An epithalamium composed by Professor A. Cortada was sung by the guests, and Professor Agramonte then conducted a programme of music. Lander's orchestra played during the banquet. The festivity, including dancing, was kept up until daylight, when the bride and groom left the house on their wedding trip. The ushers were Montague Marks, Joseph M. Henriques, ex-Judge Joachimsen, Frederick Conette, Henry Morrison, Dr. Elsborg, W. H. Smith, the Misses de Lima and the Misses de Sola. The bride wore a white satin dress, point lace, orange blossoms and diamonds.

Frederick E. Suse and Miss Leontine Sauer, daughter of the late Philip Emil Sauer, were married yesterday afternoon at the house of the bride's mother, No. 141 East Fifty-eighth-st., by the Rev. Father McDonald, of St. Agnes's Church. Alexander Burrows was the best man and the ushers were Leo and John Marie. Miss Leontine and Josephine, Sallie and Marie Marie, cousins of the bride, were the bridesmaids. There was a reception after the ceremony.
